ANNOUNCER
They're all over television, people going public about gorging, gambling, smoking, drinking.

OPRAH WINFREY, TALK SHOW HOST
It really is like a disease. It is addiction.

ANNOUNCER
But is addiction a disease out of your control, or is it an excuse to blame others?

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(OC) You know that gambling, the house wins.

JEAN BROCHU, LAWYER
I was sick. Those machines make me sick.

ANNOUNCER
Tonight, a different way to think about the bad habit you can't seem to kick. Maybe you can, if you really want to.

DOCTOR JEFFREY SCHALER, PSYCHOLOGIST
Addiction is a behavior, and all behaviors are choices.

ANNOUNCER
Meet a sex addict who spent years in therapy.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(OC) Nobody said, "just stop it, don't do it"?

SUE SILVERMAN, AUTHOR "LOVE SICK"
No, no.
And a man hooked on cocaine and alcohol.

(OC) How did you stop?

I have my own 12-step program, and the first 11 steps don't mean (censored by network) and the 12th is "don't do it."

Are you part of America's so-called addiction to food? These women say it's not their fault they're fat.

It's gonna be easier to change society than it is to change my body, so that's what I'm working on.

But some experts say you have the power to change. No more excuses, no more saying, "Help Me, I Can't Help Myself." Here is John Stossel.

Addiction, the dictionary defines it as "compulsive need." The implication is that if you're addicted, you're helpless. You have no free will. Sounds right. Watching TV, you'd think the whole country's addicted to something.

Flicking channels just one day this fall, we caught this piece on people supposedly addicted to an Internet video game. The same day on "Dr. Phil", and on "20/20"... We're discovering that people can be addicted to just about everything, and that leads us to think nobody can control anything.

Stanton Peele is the author of the "Diseasing of America."

The United States has elevated addiction to a national icon. It's our symbol, it's our excuse.

I just had to keep doing it because that was the only time I felt love.

Sue Silverman says she was a sex addict.

It was such a compulsion that I felt I had to do it over and over and over again.
She wrote a book about it titled "Love Sick." That's earned her applause, an honorary college degree. She says the college and talk shows, love the idea of sex as addiction.

Sex was my drug of choice. I was like a love junkie.

Why do you call it an addiction?

I couldn't stop it for years.

Could you just stop it, not do it?

If I'd had somebody like you to say that to me...

She says she went to ten therapists. Not one told her to stop or that it was her fault. She said it was her father's fault.

I absolutely would not have been a sex addict if he hadn't molested me.

Blaming others is popular today.

Lawyers have already used this argument to win billions from tobacco companies. And what's next? Well, ever play one of these video slot machines? In Canada, some lawyers are now suing the government, saying it, by operating these machines, is responsible for getting people addicted.

This machine is eating your money very, very quickly. And there is nothing that a player can do. He was helpless.

He is Jean Brochu, a lawyer himself. This lawyer didn't know he could lose all that money?

No, he didn't know.

I think it's the government's fault.

He was not aware that the machine was built in order to cheat him. He couldn't believe it.
[01]06:31:36  JEAN BROCHU, LAWYER
No, not, not the. . .

[01]06:31:39  JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(OC) You were putting the money in?

[01]06:31:40  JEAN BROCHU, LAWYER
I think that the machine give me the money, okay?

[01]06:31:43  JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(OC) But you're not a dumb guy. You're a lawyer.

[01]06:31:47  JEAN BROCHU, LAWYER
No. Yeah.

[01]06:31:47  JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(OC) You know that gambling, the house wins?

[01]06:31:50  JEAN BROCHU, LAWYER
I was sick. Those machines make me sick.

[01]06:31:54  JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) He says his sickness led him to embezzle $50,000 to put into the machines. And the government's responsible, says Brochu, because there aren't enough warnings on the machines. Gamblers we talked to pointed out warnings are all over the place.

[01]06:32:09  MALE ONE, GAMBLER
Unless you're blind, and you can't look at the big posters up there or the little stickers up here, I say you're blind.

[01]06:32:17  MALE TWO, GAMBLER
What about if this guy was always winning? What would he say about the government? "Yeah, I love the government."

[01]06:32:23  JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) Brochu insists the government made him sick. And he's suing them for $50,000 to restore his dignity and pay his therapy bills. Illness suggests he can't help himself. But he could have stopped.

[01]06:32:39  ROGER GARNEAU, LAWYER
Could he?

[01]06:32:41  JEAN BROCHU, LAWYER
I don't think so.

[01]06:32:42  ROGER GARNEAU, LAWYER
The experts say he couldn't, because he was addicted.

[01]06:32:47  DOCTOR JEFFREY SCHALER, PSYCHOLOGIST
They use the idea that addiction is a disease to make more money for themselves. They're addicted to money.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) Psychologist Jeff Schaler has written a book called "Addiction is a Choice."

DOCTOR JEFFREY SCHALER, PSYCHOLOGIST
Addiction is a behavior, and all behaviors are choices. What's next? Are we going to blame fast food restaurants for the foods that they sell based on the marketing, because the person got addicted to hamburgers and French fries?

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) Well, yes, actually. Two weeks after he said that, some children sued McDonald's.

PETER JENNINGS, ABC NEWS
(OC) They blame McDonald's for causing them to become obese.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) They've lost the first round in court, but they're trying again.

DOCTOR STANTON PEELE, AUTHOR "DISEASING OF AMERICA"
It pays to say you're addicted. It pays to say you're out of control. People aren't stupid. They recognize that this is the best excuse they can offer.

NANCY MATTSON, LAWYER
She just simply could not control the spending.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) "Impulse control disorder" is the excuse Rosemary Heinen's lawyer used to explain Heinen's shopping. Heinen was a corporate manager at Starbucks who embezzled $3.7 million, which she then used to buy things, lots of things. When police checked out her property, they found 32 cars and much more.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS (CONTINUED)
(VO) In her house, there were hundreds of Barbie dolls. Her lawyer says she didn't steal the $3 million for pleasure.

NANCY MATTSON, LAWYER
As much as she was buying, she wasn't enjoying these items once she had them. They were stored away, collecting dust. Now, there are a few exceptions to that. She bought a yacht for her husband.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) In court, a psychiatrist testified she was unable to obey the law.

NANCY MATTSON, LAWYER
She shouldn't get what the state's asking for.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) What the state was asking for was a seven-year jail sentence.

NANCY MATTSON, LAWYER
She's a sick woman.
This is not a new idea. "West Side Story" poked fun at this years ago. And plenty of people have argued that being psychologically disturbed should excuse them from punishment if they break a law.

When Washington's mayor, Marion Barry, was caught smoking crack, he complained that because of his sickness, he shouldn't have had to go to jail. The argument didn't work for him, but it did work for the man who stabbed Monica Seles. He said he was sick with love for Seles' rival, Steffi Graf. A judge agreed, and set him free, saying, he might not have been responsible for his actions.

Would the "I did it, but I'm not responsible" defense work for Rosemary Heinen? It shouldn't, said the prosecutor.

Most people who commit a crime, any kind of crime, have some sort of personality or mental disorder. But that still doesn't mean that she was unable to stop stealing. If that was the standard, I guess we would never ever prosecute pedophiles. After all, they suffer from pedophilia.

The judge did put Heinen in jail. Would the "helplessly addicted" defense work for Jean Brochu? The prosecutor wanted to lock you up.

Yeah.

But you're not in jail.

No, I'm not in jail. I'm still out. The judge said that, "yes, Mr. Brochu is sick."

The judge gave him probation and told him, "see a psychologist." His mother paid back the money he stole. You stole $50,000. You chose to do that. You weren't helpless.

I don't chose to do that. I was sick. I was in another world.

Now he and his lawyer are suing on behalf of all addicted gamblers in Quebec, claiming the government's responsible for getting them addicted, too. What do you want?

$700 million.

Think you'll win?

I'm very confident.
JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(OC) He should be. Increasingly, society is accepting this idea that addiction is someone else's fault.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
They don't have free will?

STEPHEN DEWEY, BROOKHAVEN NATIONAL LABS
That's correct. They actually lose their free will, it becomes so overwhelming.

DOCTOR SALLY SATEL, PSYCHIATRIST
I think it's very harmful to tell people they have no control over behavior when they do.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
An inability? They're out of control?

STEPHEN DEWEY, BROOKHAVEN NATIONAL LABS
They're absolutely out of control. They lose cortical function, frontal lobe function in their brain that allows them to incorporate and make executive decisions.
JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) Dewey takes this message to schools, showing kids brain scans which he says prove his point.

STEPHEN DEWEY, BROOKHAVEN NATIONAL LABS
The cocaine abuser has destroyed many of his dopamine receptors.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) The kids are impressed. Dewey tells them addiction causes chemical changes that hijack your brain. And he and others say our genes predispose some of us to addiction's loss of control. Researchers at Harvard believe they've found one of those genes in the zebrafish.

TRISTAN DARLAND, RESEARCHER
That's how I know they're stoned a lot of times, is they do this little circling thing.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) When researcher Tristan Darland puts cocaine on a pad and sticks it on one side of a fish tank, fish like the feeling they get so much, they hang around the area, even after the cocaine's removed. Then he bred a family of fish that had one gene altered. These fish turned out to be immune to the lure of the cocaine. They swim back and forth between both sides of the tank, while the other fish stay on the side where they'd gotten stoned. Darland says this shows that addiction's largely genetic.

TRISTAN DARLAND, RESEARCHER
These fish don't know anything about peer pressure. They either respond or they don't respond to the drug.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) Proof, he says, that drugs can hijack the brain. At the Medical College of Wisconsin, Dr. Robert Risinger scans the brains of human addicts while they watch a video of people getting high on crack. It's what they call a "craving" video. He then shows them a hard-core sex film. The brain scans show the addicts get more excited by the craving videos. The drugs become more powerful than sex, because addiction's a disease that changes your brain, says Dewey.

STEPHEN DEWEY, BROOKHAVEN NATIONAL LABS
There's evidence that in chronic use of the drug, those changes don't come back.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(OC) They don't have free will?

STEPHEN DEWEY, BROOKHAVEN NATIONAL LABS
That's correct. They actually lose their free will, it becomes so overwhelming.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) And if they've lost their free will, how can you blame them for taking drugs?

LIZ, RECOVERING HEROIN ADDICT
You're not a horrible person, you have a horrible disease.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) Liz is a former heroin addict.
LIZ, RECOVERING HEROIN ADDICT

It's definitely a disease. Well, that's what they tell us. I go to NA meetings and we're taught that addiction is, is a disease, just like cancer or anything else. That's the only way I can look at it. Otherwise, I'm just crazy.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS

(VO) And scientists say the shock of withdrawal, pictured in movies like this one, illustrate the physical hold of addiction accurately.

JAMES FREY, AUTHOR "A MILLION LITTLE PIECES"

It sucked. I shook. I threw up. I saw thing that weren't there. It's (CENSORED BY NETWORK) miserable.

LIZ, RECOVERING HEROIN ADDICT

You can't sleep, you can't walk, you can't think.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS

(VO) Frank Sinatra demonstrated it well in this movie, says Dr. Sally Satel.

DOCTOR SALLY SATEL, PSYCHIATRIST

It's certainly a very intense biological process. But I think it's very harmful to tell people they have no control over a behavior when they do.

(VO) Satel's one of many addiction experts who say the addiction as brain disease theory is harmful to addicts and wrong. What's wrong with calling it a brain disease? It sort of lets the person know it's not all his fault. He's got a real problem.

DOCTOR SALLY SATEL, PSYCHIATRIST

Well, he does have a problem. It's a problem he created, and it's a problem that he has responsibility for solving.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS

(OC) But at least it takes the stigma away.

DOCTOR SALLY SATEL, PSYCHIATRIST

Why would you want to take the stigma away? I can't think of anything more worthwhile to stigmatize.

JAMES FREY, AUTHOR "A MILLION LITTLE PIECES"

People need to get rid of the idea that, that addiction is caused by anything other than themselves. You know, they're not victims of anything other than their own bad decisions.

(VO) James Frey has written a book about his experience as an addict. He took just about every drug, from alcohol to crack. Did you think about getting high all the time?

JAMES FREY, AUTHOR "A MILLION LITTLE PIECES"

I didn't think about it, I just went and did it.

(VO) Yet he says he wasn't powerless. He scoffs at Dewey's claim that addicts' brains compel them to keep taking drugs. Doctors say, "look at the brain scan."

ASK FOR TRANSCRIPTS FROM --- THE TRANSCRIPTION COMPANY: (818) 848-6500 --- WWW.TRANSCRIPTS.NET
I don't particularly care what a doctor tells me. It's a decision. When I pick up this cup of coffee and I take a sip, I'm making a decision to do it because I like it and because I want it, and it doesn't have anything to do with a disease, and it doesn't have anything to do with what a brain scan tells me.

(VO) Many doctors agree, saying, so what if drugs cause changes in the brain, you can still choose not to take them.

You can look at brains all day. They can be lit up like Christmas trees. But unless a person behaves in a certain way, we wouldn't call them an addict.

Just keeping a rat in a cage, where it is allowed to self-administer any narcotic drug, doesn't prove that people become enslaved to drugs. You have to compare that rat with another rat in a better environment, and see whether the same levels of consumption will occur.

(VO) They have done that. Scientists in Canada got rats addicted to morphine and then offered them a choice between morphine or water, in two different environments, either alone in these cages or in a nicer place to live, with more space, other rats to play with, a chance to do what rats like to do.

Actually, they took a little, but when given a choice, the caged rats drank eight times as much morphine as the rat park rats. Whether you get addicted also depends on how you're treated. Here at Wake Forest University, male monkeys lived together for three months and established a pecking order. It's pretty clear who's boss here. Then Dr. Michael Nader prepared doses of cocaine for them. The monkeys were harnessed to a chair so they wouldn't dislodge a catheter. The monkeys who'd been bullied by the boss monkeys banged the lever to get as much cocaine as they could. But the boss monkeys, just by virtue of being dominant, had less interest in the drug. It's just like the human world, says Nader.

Individuals that have no control in their job show a greater propensity for substance abuse than those that have control.

(VO) These comparisons suggest that addiction is a choice, not a disease that takes away free will. But to just stop drinking or using drugs sounds so unlikely. The message from the treatment industry is that you need professional help.

These programs make it sound like it's this huge hurdle and only with our help, can you be helped.

But people do this all the time.

That's true. We seldom hear about it. But studies suggest most addicts who recover do so without professional help.
For example, look what happened after the Vietnam War. In Vietnam, heroin was cheap, pure, widely available. Thousands of soldiers became addicted. But most assumed when they'd come home, they'd stop. The government wasn't so sure. So they tracked hundreds of soldiers for three years after they returned home. They found 88 percent of those addicted to narcotics in Vietnam no longer were.

What explained why they gave it up? Change of environment. Change in mind-set. It didn't have anything to do with the power of heroin. People love to have a bogeyman. They love to have a devil that is dangerous and scary, that we can fight.

But it is a kind of a devil. You have lots of strong people whose lives are wrecked. They wrecked their own lives. The drugs don't do it.

We know how hard it is for addicts to stop using heroin or cocaine, but did you know that quitting tobacco may be just as tough? Government public service announcements say cigarettes are just as addictive as hard drugs.

The announcements feature people who say they cannot quit. Could not. The government says addiction takes away your freedom to choose.
(VO) Even tobacco companies now admit nicotine's addictive, but does that mean it really denies smokers' freedom? That they're helplessly chained to a terrible drug? Or is it possible that many smokers enjoy the experience of smoking? Many talk about it the way others talk about listening to music or having sex.

STEVEN LOZOWICKI, FORMER CIGARETTE SMOKER
It's the most wonderful experience that you can possibly go through. It's so satisfying.

(VO) We talked to this group of smokers and ex-smokers. These four have quit, these four still smoke.

STEVEN LOZOWICKI, FORMER CIGARETTE SMOKER
It is so, so fulfilling, at your core.

DOCTOR JEFFREY SCHALER, PSYCHOLOGIST
People like to smoke. They like the activity. They like the ritual of smoke. They like the sensation of smoke. That doesn't have anything to do with nicotine. That has to do with the behavioral ceremony and ritual, which is really what's important to the person.

(VO) It's what Hollywood's captured in so many movies. It's not just that the actors need something to do with their hands. Smoking looks cool. Hollywood shows what today many are reluctant to admit, lots of people just like to smoke.

STEVEN LOZOWICKI, FORMER CIGARETTE SMOKER
I can remember specific cigarettes. A snowstorm, standing under an eave and watching that curl of smoke, blue, gray, blue.

(VO) As much as he loved it, Steven Lozowicki was able to quit.

STEVEN LOZOWICKI, FORMER CIGARETTE SMOKER
One night, I literally said, I didn't want to go out for another pack. I just got tired of it.

DOCTOR JEFFREY SCHALER, PSYCHOLOGIST
Every time a person quits using cigarettes, they do it in the same way. They make a decision to stop using.

(VO) Jodi Valentino quit after smoking two and a half packs a day for years.

JODI VALENTINO, FORMER CIGARETTE SMOKER
When I really made a serious decision, it was over, it was done.

(VO) For gym teacher John Divanny, the turning point came the night he began dating a girl who didn't like smoking.

JOHN DIVANNY, FORMER CIGARETTE SMOKER
I was about to get off the exit, had my last cigarette, threw it out the window. Within a year I was married.

You seldom hear about those people who just quit on their own. No one's saying it's easy, but it may surprise you that quitting is not the exception, it's the rule. In fact, almost 60 percent of smokers have quit. That's 50 million Americans. It's obvious that people do have free will.

Look at the numbers. For most of the last century, smoking in America went steadily up. Up through the Depression, through World War II. Then in 1964, the Surgeon General issued his famous warning. From that point, smoking steadily dropped.

We need to give people more credit for controlling their behavior than we do.

Check out this experiment. At the University of Vermont, researchers pay pregnant women to quit. If tests like this show they're clean, they get vouchers worth six or $7 at first, up to $40 toward the end of the experiment. Janna Hamel had smoked 13 years, but then she quit when she got the vouchers.

It was exciting to see my vouchers build up. We got crib sheets, blankets. I got three pairs of nice, expensive shoes for myself.

You'd think having a healthy baby would be more important than crib sheets or shoes. But the more immediate reward of the voucher is more powerful, says lead researcher Stephen Higgins.

So we can bring something that seems somewhat trivial, a voucher worth $10 or $15 into play. But by delivering it immediately, it's more effective.

The fact that people will quit when they're paid money just goes to show you that they aren't enslaved to a physiological or genetically-based addiction.

But the drug research establishment insists most addicts are enslaved. They don't have free will. But if some can quit, they have free will.

But some can't quit.

But most quit, right? I mean, haven't 50 million Americans quit tobacco, and tobacco is the toughest?

For some people, yes. That doesn't mean that it isn't a disease.

Yes, it does, says Schaler.
Smoking is something that you can willfully control. But once you have cancer, you can't choose to stop having cancer.

We asked Schaler to bring his ideas to our group of smokers.

I submit that every single thing that you do, you do because you want to do. So if you continue smoking, it's cause you want to smoke. And when you quit, it's because you want to quit.

So you think there's nothing in nicotine that's addicting?

There's no such thing as an addicting substance.

Oh, baloney.

I have a problem with what you say.

Most of the group did at first, even the ones who'd quit smoking. But after a while, Johanna Laurent started to waver.

Does a part of you ever say to yourself, "I'm lying when I say I can't quit?"

Yeah.

Soon she was convinced, and trying to convince the others.

No, listen to me. If you decide to choose to stop smoking, you can.

I can't. You can't right now.

Yes, you can. We just choose not to.

I don't think it's fair to turn around and say to somebody, "yes, you can." You don't know him.

Listen. You know what?
FEMALE ONE, CIGARETTE SMOKER
You don't know him.

JOHANNA LAURENT, CIGARETTE SMOKER
You're not listening to me. I said, you got to believe that you have the choice.

FEMALE ONE, CIGARETTE SMOKER
Do you wanna stop smoking? You say you wanted to.

JOHANNA LAURENT, CIGARETTE SMOKER
Yeah, you know what?

FEMALE ONE, CIGARETTE SMOKER
So how come you haven't?

JOHANNA LAURENT, CIGARETTE SMOKER
Because I haven't made the choice. And I have to be responsible for that. I haven't said, "you know what, Johanna? That's it. Choose it."

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) Shortly after this interview, Johanna did choose it. After 20 years of smoking, she just stopped. Which raises the question, if addiction is a choice.

MALE FOUR, FORMER CIGARETTE SMOKER
Who came up with the slogan or the term addiction?

DOCTOR JEFFREY SCHALER, PSYCHOLOGIST
The idea that addiction is a disease really came from attitudes about alcohol. Benjamin Rush, who's considered the father of American psychiatry, pronounced chronic drunkenness to be a disease.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) But calling addiction a disease didn't mean it was one.

DOCTOR JEFFREY SCHALER, PSYCHOLOGIST
He didn't just call drunkenness a disease, he said that people who had black skin had a congenital form of leprosy called negritude. He said that if you didn't join the revolutionary cause, you had a disease called "revolutiona."

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) But the idea of alcoholism and other addictions as diseases had taken hold, and it's only spread since.

MALE FOUR, FORMER CIGARETTE SMOKER
So it's just the terminology that we're really talking about.

DOCTOR JEFFREY SCHALER, PSYCHOLOGIST
But the terminology is very important. Because, if you ask people to change the terminology, all kinds of things change. You see?

MALE FOUR, FORMER CIGARETTE SMOKER
Yeah.
If you say, "I won't" instead of "I can't," you have a different experience. If you say, "it's a choice not a disease," well then insurance companies may not reimburse for that. You see? If you say it's a choice, then the tobacco companies may not be slammed for millions of dollars.

(OC) And above all, many experts say, if you say it's a choice, you can quit.

I would like every manufacturer, every airline, every theater to start catering to me. I need to be pampered.

Does she? Or should she be doing more of this? When "Help Me, I Can't Help Myself with John Stossel" returns.

If addiction's a disease, then you're kind of helpless. If you can't control your addiction, the rest of us should accommodate your illness. So where does eating too much fit into this?

The government says 2-thirds of us are overweight. We're eating more than ever, and many people say they can't stop.

It really is like a disease. It is addiction.

(OC) Is it an addiction? I pig out. After dinner, I often eat several chocolate chip cookies, and then, I hate to admit this, two or three dove bars. But the next day, when I feel my gut hanging over my belt, I cut back. Can't others cut back? Are they physically addicted? Steven Dewey says, yes. People who are overweight, some cannot help it?

Absolutely. We have people that we work with who have to have chocolate.

(OC) But I crave chocolate, but I control it.

Well, you're lucky then. Part of your disease hasn't obviously progressed to the point where you lose control.

We who have lost the control over the amount we eat are considered to be food addicted. Does everybody identify with that concept?

In meetings all around America, Kay Sheppard tells people your bodies are programmed to be addicted. Her books have sold 160,000 copies.

We're born with a defective gene. And as soon as we pick up that first lollipop, we're on our way. So we have alcoholics, cocaine addicts, nicotine addicts and obese people.

Many here say they are out of control.

As if I had no choice at all. I would walk over broken glass to get to my food when I'm in the disease.

It's not just a matter of willpower, says Sheppard.

It's biogenetic. The same thing determines eye color, hair color, and whether we're addicts or not addicts.

Demonstrators around America agree with that. Since you are born this way, they say, you should just love your fat. In Boston, the Association to Advance Fat Acceptance once held a rally to demand "fat rights." They shouldn't have to adjust to society's expectation that they lose weight, they say, society should meet their special needs 'cause they cannot change.

It's gonna be easier to change society than it is to change my body.

So that's what I'm working on. Really.

I would like every manufacturer, every airline, every theater to start catering to me. I need to be pampered.

Fat activists say it should be illegal for ballet schools to favor the thin. And illegal for airlines to charge obese people more if they occupy, say, two seats. Charging for two seats is "sizism."

"Sizism" is akin to ageism, racism and sexism.

This is not like ageism or sexism. You could change. All you have to do is eat less.
FEMALE FIVE, FAT ACTIVIST
I'm eating three square meals a day and you want to take that away one of them? You want to take away two of them? How hungry do I have to be to make you happy?

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS (OC) But you're equating sexism and racism with "fatism." And I'm just saying, you don't have to be fat.

FEMALE FIVE, FAT ACTIVIST
I need the government to enact legislation that makes it possible for me and my fat sisters and brothers to get equal treatment in jobs, in health care, in accommodations in the public.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS (VO) They're getting their wish. San Francisco recently passed a law prohibiting discrimination based on weight. That means that fitness companies that want to hire instructors who look like this should also hire instructors who look like this, Jennifer Portnick wanted to be a jazzercise instructor, but jazzercise rejected her saying instructors must have a fit appearance. Portnick's web-site says she is fit. You can be fat and fit?

JENNIFER PORTNICK, EXERCISE INSTRUCTOR
Amazingly, it's true. The healthiest, the happiest person I can be happens to be 230 pounds.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS (VO) After jazzercise wouldn't hire Portnick, she filed a complaint with the city of San Francisco and won. Jazzercise has agreed to start hiring fat fitness instructors. Why did she have to force jazzercise to change? Couldn't she just start a class on her own? Actually, she did. That's what this is. And she's doing well. I went one day and was impressed. She and the others in the class worked hard. Good for them. But why force jazzercise to do it your way?

FEMALE SIX, EXERCISE CLASS ATTENDEE
It's a diversity issue. If Jennifer was an African-American or Hispanic, we wouldn't be having this conversation.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS (VO) Race and body size are both predetermined? I accept that losing weight is tougher for them than for me, but they cannot lose it? This is their genetic destiny? Dr. Schaler says that's nonsense. They could take the weight off.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS (CONTINUED) (OC) Genes make a difference. I can eat a lot and I don't get fat. Other people, the fat just seems to grow on them.

DOCTOR JEFFREY SCHALER, PSYCHOLOGIST
You may process food differently because of your genes. It doesn't mean, regardless of what they say, that they can't control their behavior. Because people control their behavior all the time.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS (OC) It's only recently that so many Americans have stopped controlling their behavior. In 1960, only 13 percent of Americans were obese. Now it's more than 30. Did our genes suddenly change? People from other cultures look at fat Americans like the fat rights demonstrators as oddities to be photographed. It's a topic of conversation among immigrant groups. Americans look different?
FEMALE SEVEN, IMMIGRANT
So big.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) This group says fat's one of the first things they noticed when they came to America.

FEMALE EIGHT, IMMIGRANT
All of a sudden they're like, they're like, just so much bigger. And they seem to think that's normal.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) It's not normal, they say. It's what you Americans eat.

FEMALE SEVEN, IMMIGRANT
Everybody eat a lot.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) They couldn't believe the size of our refrigerators.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS (CONTINUED)
(VO) They were stunned by serving sizes in homes and restaurants.

MALE FIVE, IMMIGRANT
"Dim sum" in Hong Kong, "dim sum" means, you know, literal translation is "little bit of heart." Little being the key word. Here, "dim sum" is huge.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) Now you may say, wait a second, these other people have different body types. Svelte's the image we have of Asians, but when they eat a lot, they get fat, too. And in America, increasingly, we eat more and move less.

FEMALE NINE, IMMIGRANT
Everything seems to be more lazy. You can drive to everything. I've never seen a drive-in bank before. You can drive to your pharmacy. You don't even have to get out anywhere.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(VO) That's what really matters, say the experts, the fact that we move too little and eat too much.

MALE SIX, IMMIGRANT
Here, America, there's plenty of food. So you keep eating, eating, eating. That's why you, you grow fat. It's the food make the difference, not the gene.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS
(OC) If it's not the genes, you have a choice. When we return, we'll look at those who promise to help you make that choice.

"Help Me. I Can't Help Myself." If that's how you feel about your cigarette habit, or drug or alcohol addiction, or even your lust for food, there are lots of professionals who will say "good, you understand you need our help."

This treatment hospital charges addicts more than $25,000 a month. They offer all kinds of things I wouldn't have thought were treatments for addiction.

We use equine-assisted psychotherapy here.

Cheryl Brown, their marketing supervisor, gave us the tour.

This is our climbing wall. It's another way for them to explore how they're keeping themselves stuck.

Sierra Tucson says it's up to the addict to change, but they also say addiction's a disease and most addicts need help.

If you think it’s not a disease, that it’s a weakness, the person will continue to try to fix it themselves, in which case he's gonna fail.

Medical director Michael Scott paints a bleak picture for those who don't get help.

They will often end up dead, divorced, homeless. It just ends up in disaster.

To prevent disaster, they offer a program based on the principles of Alcoholics Anonymous, plus therapy and all sorts of things.

The pool area here, for example, we use for body image work.

At Sierra Tucson, they have facials, body wraps, tai chi.

She's really great at helping people's chi start to move.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS (VO) You might think the more you pay, the better the treatment. After all, celebrities go to places like Promises, overlooking the Pacific in Malibu.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS (CONTINUED) (OC) And experts agree, for people with severe problems, inpatient care may be best. But many experts say for most addicts, cheaper outpatient programs can work just as well. Hazelden has research that claims 53 percent of its clients were drug-free a year later. Sierra Tucson claims 56.5 percent were clean for at least six months. That's pretty good. But be wary of clinics that make extreme success claims.

DOCTOR JEFFREY SCHALER, PSYCHOLOGIST They're taking advantage of people who are suffering in order to make money. They distort the treatment success rates.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS (CONTINUED) (VO) Reporting on addiction treatments over the years, I've learned that success stories may turn out to mean people quit for a week, or just 'til the end of the program. Aren't you conning people, desperate people a little bit here? I mean, 80 percent success rate, pay $500. The 80 percent success claim was based on a research paper by the founder of the clinic, here under arrest for racketeering. The government shut his clinics down.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS (CONTINUED) (VO) We are used to being skeptical of amazing claims made by weight loss programs. We should also be skeptical of the numbers used by many of those who sell addiction cures. Nicotine patch makers claim the patch will dramatically improve your odds of quitting smoking.

DOCTOR STANTON PEELE, AUTHOR "DISEASING OF AMERICA" We're selling nicotine patches, we're selling the Betty Ford Center. We tell people, "you can never get over an addiction on your own. You have to come to us and buy something to get over an addiction." It's not true and it's dangerous to tell them that.

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS (CONTINUED) (OC) Dangerous because some experts say it deters people from trying to get over their addictions on their own. And while treatment's helped a lot of people, surprisingly, studies show, most people who have conquered their addictions did it on their own.

[COMMERCIAL BREAK]

JOHN STOSSEL, ABC NEWS (OC) If you're addicted to something, whose fault is that? The message we often hear from the treatment facilities is, it's not the addict's fault.

CHERYL BROWN, MARKETING DIRECTOR, SIERRA TUCSON It's not their fault that they ended up in the situation any more than it's somebody's fault that they ended up with blue hair or brown eyes and brown hair or blonde hair.
